

Supplementary Electronic Material

The EUROPEAN JOURNAL OF TRAUMA AND EMERGENCY SURGERY features additional electronic pages. Authors with relevant material are strongly encouraged to submit two types of multimedia material, video clips and supplementary data or figures. If difficulties arise, please contact the Editorial Office for advice.

Details of the acceptable formats are as follows:

Video clips: These should be submitted as MPEG, QuickTime files or animated GIFs. To keep file sizes reasonable we recommend a maximum length of 1 minute.

Supplementary data: Data files or extra figures can be submitted in any of the usual formats (EPS, JPG, GIF, TIFF, etc.). Authors are requested to submit a "read-me" file, too, containing brief instructions on how to use the file, and a signed statement confirming that the material is as stated and is pertinent to the article.

All supplementary files should be submitted at the same time as the original article. The material should be sent by e-mail or on disk to the Editorial Office.

Manuscripts – Copyright

Articles, which have either been submitted or appeared elsewhere, will not be accepted for publication. Authors are responsible for ensuring that there are no infringements of copyrights. The editorial staff reserves the right to revise manuscripts. Authors whose names are listed and who are not members of the editorial staff are personally responsible for the contents of any articles published. Neither the editors nor the publisher may be held responsible for these contributions.

On accepting a manuscript for publication, the publisher acquires the exclusive right of use, including the production of offprints and reprints – also for industrial clients, translation into other languages, the granting of permission to other publishers to print or reproduce parts of the article, figures or the whole article, reproduction in other journals of our own publishing house, photomechanical and electronic duplication, and the reuse of figures.

The journal and all contributions and illustrations contained therein are protected by copyright laws. Any usage occurring outside of the restrictions of the copyright laws which takes place without the approval of the publisher is strictly prohibited and punishable by law. This applies in particular to duplications, translations, microfilm production and storing and processing in electronic systems. A trademark may be legally protected even if, when reproduced in this journal, the symbol ® or other indication of possible legal protection is lacking. Any dosages indicated in this journal, in particular in the case of new drugs, should always be compared with the relevant information provided by the manufacturer in the instruction leaflets accompanying the medication.
